

Notification, Registration, and Logistics

The NBER-NSF Time Series Conference is the premier annual conference in time series. (For some history, see here.) The 2024 meeting at the University of Pennsylvania will be in-person only, beginning Friday morning September 20 and ending Saturday mid-afternoon September 21.

Inquiries of any kind: Please don't hesitate to email the conference coordinator, Violette Swinton, at aswinton@sas.upenn.edu.

Notification: The call for papers is now closed; we expect to send notifications and post the program in late June or early July.

Registration: Registration is now open, and it closes Friday, September 6. Registration includes meals and is free of charge, but it is required of all participants (speakers, poster session presenters, session chairs, and all others). To register, please use the form here.

Travel subsidy: We expect to have funds available to partially subsidize travel, although we will not know the amount until after the conference. Please let Violette know if you would like to be considered.

Venue: The conference venue is the Perlman Center for Political Science and Economics (PCPSE), at the intersection of 36th & Walnut Streets. Enter the PCPSE building on 36th Street. The conference is down the stairs in the lower-level lecture hall. Google Map location and directions here.

Internet: Wi-Fi is available at the conference venue through Wi-Fi network "AirPennet Guest". Simply input your credentials and it should connect.

Hotels: Options in University City very close to the conference venue include The Study at University City (room block here), The Inn at Penn (room block here), and Sheraton Philadelphia University City (room block here). You can of course also make a reservation at any other hotel of your choice. It is an easy and short trip from Center City to University City by taxi/Uber, public transportation, bike share, or walking.

Arriving: Coming from the airport or by Amtrak from 30th Street Station (recently re-named William H. Gray III 30th Street Station -- no one knows who William H. Gray III is, but it may come up on your GPS...), instruct the driver to drop you at 133 S. 36th Street (northeast corner of 36th & Walnut).

Restaurants: Three good options very close to the conference venue and hotels are Louie Louie, White Dog, and Pod. Other options are plentiful; see for example <http://www.visitphilly.com/>

Philadelphia Sights and Attractions: If you have some extra time, the City of Philadelphia has excellent museums, including the Philadelphia Museum of Art, the Barnes Foundation, and the Rodin Museum. It also has an historic Old City where you can see Independence Hall, the Liberty Bell, the Constitution Center, the Betsy Ross House, etc. See <http://www.visitphilly.com/>.
